Review of the Month

WHAT'S ON AT IEDU GROUP

This month we participated in three remarkable events: First event was Ved International Education Consultancy hosted Admission Week at Putalisadak, Kathmandu, second event was Nepcoms Services Pokhara hosted an Australia Education Info Day at Siddhartha Chowk, Pokhara. Similarly, third event held in Nepcoms Globed Chitwan organised an Australia Education Info Day at Prem Market Saheed Chowk Narayangarh, Chitwan. Mr Dhiraj Shrestha, Marketing and Admission officer of the IEDU group, attended all these events. He addressed students' queries and alleviated their concerns about Australia and Australian education, including admissions at IEDU Group, scholarships, and visa processes. Representatives from various prominent educational institutions in Australia were invited to interact with the students.

These events were organised to provide factual knowledge to the students about the Australian education system. Many potential students enthusiastically attended the session, and we hope to see them all at IEDU later this year. These kinds of events are a source to enrich knowledge and interest in the field of global education for students and their parents.

The Benefits of VET study for International Students

The Benefits of VET study for International Students-Vocational training refers to instructional programs or courses that add to the practical knowledge and training of the individual in a particular field, for instance, hospitality, business, trade, technology, office work, and many others that make them industry ready. The coolest part of the vocational course is direct interaction with pros. VET services provided by a Registered Training Organization, or RTO, assist students in preparing for a new job, a career change, or continuing to a higher degree.

Firstly, vocational courses emphasize practical learning, whereas degree programs prioritize theory. Vocational courses are less expensive with lower enrolment and material expenses, but the chances of finding a better job remain high. While university programs are often lengthy and expensive, students will be tangled in the topic once enrolled. Many institutions provide vocational training and education programmes for international students at any time of year. Unlike degree courses, these courses do not have rigid deadlines. Secondly, it is important to note that many students directly enrol in university, and on the other hand, some students hardly get accepted to university first. But VET courses are more flexible; hence students are more likely to get admitted. After completing the vocational training, students can either continue their studies or acquire a job. Eager to enrol in a vocational education and training program? At IEDU Group, we offer the most demanding vocational courses.
